PEACE NOW SIMPLY A TRUCE MI-O-NA STOPS ALL

Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown Says It Would Only Serve to Give Germany Time to Prepare for Another War-Our Most Imperative Duty to Buy Liberty Bonds.

the world that it should have power to draw into the war a nation so peaceable and unwarlike as the United States? Perhaps, no better single definition of Democracy can be found than that immortal phrase of Lincoln. "Government of the people, by the people, for the people," or, as phrased earlier by the celebrated Boston preacher, Theodore Parker "Government over all the people, by all the people, for all the people." It means, of course, that the people themselves, through universal suffrage, have the determining voice in settling their own affairs, affairs which affect and conaffairs, affairs which affect and concern them all. It would seem that the real statement of such a thing should prove its fairness and its rightness. And so it approves itself to the vast majority of our modern world. But why should democracy be of such impower by force and that any one or posterior which is the state is to extend its who should democracy be of such impower by force and that any one or posterior which is the state is to extend its power by force and that any one or posterior which is the state in the modern and democratic power. why should democracy be of such importance and value to the world as to simpel the larger part of the world to sacrifice everything for it? In the first place, because Democracy itself is the horrible and cruel deeds committed by he German airmy and navy outcome of centuries of evolutionary struggle and endeavor, on the part of the people, to release themselves from the people, to release themselves from the people of slavery to their rulers and acquire the right to a voice in their own affairs. we look back over history, we find the government of the people in the hands either of one man or of a few men, i. either a monarchy or an oligarchy Kings were for centuries supposed to rule by divine right. They were re-sponsible to no one but themselves and god. But, for centuries the prevailing conception of God was that of a despot, a stern, avenging judge. And this conception colored all the thethis conception colored all the the-ories of government. A king as an emperor was not supposed to rule in the interest as for the welfare of those he governed, but in the interest of himself and the governing class, i. e., the nobles and power-holding classes whom he associated with him. Of course, this meant that the people, the masses the majority were at the ed to bear the miseries and sufferings out a struggle. Thousands Perished Building Temple. As an example of those miseries and sufferings, we have only to consider that 150,000 people are supposed to have perished in the building of a single Egyptian temple. There have even came down to us some of the pit-iful songs and cries uttered by these Egyptian laborers well nigh 4,000 years ago, in which speaking of their masters they cry "They starve us, they starve us; they beat us, they beat us; but there's some one above who will punish them well." Yes, my friends, man has never been wholly without an innate sense of justice and fairness. And along with that has gone the conviction that wrongs must be righted if not in this world then in anoher. Man's belief in God's providential oversight of the world has never permitted him to lose the conviction that God is on the side of justice and right. God is on the side of justice and right.

And so, we find very early in history and continuing up through the ages, a struggle of the masses against the classes. On the one side it has been a struggle of the people to free themselves from conditions of slavery and desputism and to acquire rights and despotism, and to acquire rights and privileges long denied them. And on the other side, it has been a struggle on the part of kings and the ruling on the part of kings and the ruling classes to retain their despotic powers and keep the people slavish and abject. As an outcome of this long struggle, the people, though not without terrible suffering and sacrifice, have gradually, but progressively triumphed. Grudglingly, but steadily, kings and the traditional progressively triumphed. ingly, but steadily, kings and the tra-ditional power-holding classes have had to retreat and give up their spe-cial privileges before the advancing march of the people. Absolute mon-archy has given way to limited mon-archy, and limited monarchy to con-stitutional or nonular government. In archy, and limited monarchy to con-stitutional or popular government. In a word, all over the world, with few exceptions, the rule of the people has come to be esteemed as the fairest and only just form of government Under its being influence there has been a steady growth of peaceable been a steady growth of peaceable and humane sentiment. Whenever it finds sway, war and injustice and everything that tends to brutalize men and nations are fast losing ground and giving way to their oppo sites. For, Democracy involves some-thing more than a transfer of power "from the crown to the crowd." There is what may be called the democratic ideal. That ideal may be described as the recognition of the average man's worth as a man irrespective of the worth as a man, irrespective of the length of his lineage or purse, or of his power, position or possessions. There is not only the recognition of the average man's worth as a man, but the recognition of the possibility that his inherent worth may be realized in actual fact. In other words, the domocratic ideal is the recognition of per-sonality in all words and conditions of men. The world owes this ideal to Jesus Christ who, in His Gospel and all through His Ministry, yes, preem-inently in His death on the cross, emphasized the value and possibilities of human nature, of men simply as man.

A peace now, a peace by negotiation, would simply be a truce, said Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown, rector of Trinity Episcopal church, in a patricular discussion of the Sunday morning service. Archdeacon Brown went on to say that it would only serve to give Germany time to prepare for another and even greatest and most imperative duty at this time to buy Liberty bonds.

This patriotic sermon was but one of many delivered in churches all over the nation on Sunday. Promptly at 11 o'clock, in common with the churches of the city and country. The Star Spangled Banner was spiritedly sung. In his sermon Archdeacon Brown said:

America entered into this war to use the words of President Wilson, in order to "make the world safe for Democracy." Under the circumstances, it would seem that Democracy is of the greatest importance and value to the mordacy. Under the circumstances, it would seem that Democracy? And what is its transcendent importance to the world that it should have power to draw into the war a nation so peaceable and unwarlike as the Umited States? Perhaps, no better single bears and most timperator of the sunday of th

Bent On Acquiring Power. Against all this there is plotting today and has been plotting for over a generation, a mighty autocracy, a oneman rule, the rule of a man who claims to govern by divine appointmen and to have the divine sanction for all the atrocious and detestable deed he has authorized or permitted, a man whose whole will is bent on acquiring power over the rest of the world. Against the modern and democratic doctrine that the state is just doctrine that nations like individuals are bound to treat each other in good faith and with good will, we have the German claim to tear up, treaties as mere scraps of paper, and the German habit of spying out the weaknesses of all the countries to whom it sends its supposedly friendly ambassadors.

Against the modern and democratic doctrine that it is the duy of a state to cultivate peaceful and friendly relations with all the rest of the world, and so to serve the great cause of humanity as have the German claim to manity as have the German claim to be the greatest and most enlightened nation under heaven, and the German assertion of its right, by reason or su-perior culture and enlightenment, to dominate the rest of the world and bring it under the iron heel of its the nobles and power-holding classes whom he associated with him. Of course, this meant that the people, the masses, the majority, were at the mercy of the ruler and his nobles. The king long had the power of life and death over his subjects. Particularly the masses of the people had no rights but such as pertained to them as serfs or slavs. The land was in the hands of a few, and carefully kept so. The people could get the use of the land only as they bound themselves out to the owners, the nobles, who demanded as rental not only a large part of the produce, but a pledge to military service as well. Now naturally, the people, the masses, did not like this sort of thing. They did not consider it right and fair. Nor were they disposed to bear the miseries and sufferings.

The Peril That Threatens.

The Peril That Threatens.

Here, there is the peril that threa ens us, that threatens the whole mod-ern Democratic world, and there can be no hope of any permanent deliverance from its awful threat until the milia and overthrown.

A peace nof, a peace by negotia-tion, would simply be a truce. It would only serve to give Germany would only serve to give Germany time to prepare for another and even greater war. That is why we are in this war and must remain in it till the great foe of justice and freedom and humanity is once and for all thoroughly beaten. That is why we are sending the flower of our country to the transfer and that is why we to the trenches. And that is why we who are not able or are not expected who are not able or are not expected to go must sustain our young men and save them by lending to our government the money that is absolutely essential to their proper equipment and their safety. It is the privilege of a democracy that it can choose its own government. But with the rejudices democracy that it can choose its own government. But with the privilege goes the duty of standing back of the government which we choose. This government is the servant of those whom it governs. It realizes that those who choose it may overthrow it and therefore it has a high sense of responsibility. It aims to overn for the welfare of all. In the present case, we not only have a government which deserves our heartlest support because it is opposing a foe which threatens it is opposing a foe which threatens the welfare of us all, but a govern-ment which deserves our heartlest support because it is doing its best to provide our young men with all the equipment and appliances which are so necessary to save their lives and prevent their sacrifices from being useless and vain.

Our Greatest Duty.

Therefore, it is our greatest and most imperative duty at this time to buy Liberty Bonds, even though it be necessary to do so, to exercise the utmost economy and sacrifice. Our young men are making the great venture with the noblest spirit of idealism and heroism they are offering up their lives on the alter of freedom. up their lives on the altar of freedom and democracy. The lease we can do who are to profit by their sacrifice is to give of our dollars to back them up and see that their lives are not thrown away.

THE GARY PLAN

The Difference Between the Gary and Traditional Schools Summarized.

The Gary school plan, called into prominence just at this time by the troubles in New York, has caused many in Norwich and surrounding to inquire, "What is the Gary plan?" That's a hard question, to answer in detail, off hand, as it is so far reaching, but a comprehensive outline

It is the plan adopted in its entire ty, where it originated, in Gary, In-diana, and adopted in part elsewhere, and the difference between the Gary schools and the traditional schools, can he summarized as follows:

By having the children from the kindergarten through the high school in one school there is formed a complete community, in which the individual child meets persons of various vidual child meets persons of various ages and in which he is able to see his school life as a whole. The shops are not to make skilled mechanics, but to make it possible for the child to see the conditions in the trades as they actually are, and to help him select a trade intelligently. All of the teachers are specialists, who have the greatest freedom in developing their individuality and who are put upon their own resources. their own resources.

Every child goes to the auditorium

some time during the day, where lec-tures and demonstration work are the purpose of keeping the child in touch with the whole school life, uni-fying the school work, and at the same time teaching him how to act and become an intelligent member of an au-

The school is a great development centre, cooperating with libraries and outside institutions, including churches. On the application of the parents, the children are allowed one or two the children are allowed one or two hours a week for religious instruction. The school does not give religious instruction; this is turned over to the churches, but no child is released from regular school hours. The outside time is taken from the extra hour at play in auditorium. The schools are open from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., but all of the children are not present all of the time. On Saturday some of the schools are open all day. On Sunday the children may play at the schools under supervision. The hours are so arranged that one-half the children are in book work, while the other half are engaged in play, the other half are engaged in play, shop or auditorium. Gary is situated at the head of Gary is situated at the head of Lake Michigan, midway between the vast iron ore beds of the north and the great coal region of the south, and this, together with its excellent railroad and water facilities, caused it to be chosen as the site for the main plant of the United States Steel corporation in April, 1906. Since then the growth of the city has been rapid, and it is now the greatest steel producing place in the world and conducing place in the world and con-tains many industrial establishments
